

The diagram illustrates a complex computer system architecture, likely a mainframe or minicomputer from the 1980s. It is organized into several horizontal sections. The top section shows a network of interconnected modules, including a 'CPU' and various 'I/O' devices. Below this, there are several rows of smaller modules, some labeled with specific functions like 'MEMORY' and 'CONTROL'. The bottom section features a large, complex block labeled 'SYSTEM' which contains numerous sub-modules and interconnections. The diagram uses a mix of solid lines and dashed lines to represent different types of connections. A legend in the bottom right corner explains the symbols used for different components and connections.
